ABSTRACT

A system and method for processing control cells to prevent event missequencing and data loss are described. At least one control unit is processed to retrieve communication information related to data received along one or more communication links in a network. The at least one control unit is then stored in one or buffers. Finally, the at least one control unit is further processed to retrieve link information related to the one or more communication links.